

Seabird Island-owned Nations Creations coming to Agassiz

Seabird Island purchased the company last year and aims to continue its social enterprise past.

Local Indigenous artists will be able to see their work on gift shop items across the province — or at least, that's the hope for Nations Creations, a manufacturer of Indigenous branded goods.

“Everybody thinks an artist is a stay-at-home person doing artwork,” Sandra Bobb, manager at Nations Creations, said. “I’ve been telling everyone for years, it’s a career. You just have to find the right path.

“So now we’re hiring these staff members and artists, and giving them a path. That’s exciting.”

Nations Creations first started in 2016 as part of a social enterprise project under the Stó:lō Service Agency.

The company had received funding from the provincial government to develop a program to support workers interested in learning sophisticated, computer-based light manufacturing. With that program the company also created a business around using Indigenous art on items for gift shops, which were sold in places like the Stó:lō gift shop.

Local artists received royalties for the use of their work, and profits from sales went to employ more workers in the training program.

But, “being a social enterprise, the second the funding dries up it makes it very difficult to make it profitable,” Seabird Island executive director Jason Campbell said.

shut down and sold their trademarks and equipment.

For Seabird Island, it was the perfect opportunity.

“I just really loved their model, their intent behind providing stable employment or at least opportunities for Indigenous artists,” Campbell said.

The Band had also purchased the former Ledoux Hardware building on Pioneer Avenue around the same time that Nations Creations came up for sale.

“Magically, we had a great place to put the equipment,” Campbell said.

Although COVID-19 put a halt on the Band’s progress in setting up Nations Creations in the Pioneer building, the launch date is now “tantalizingly close,” Campbell said.

They are hoping to have the business officially up and running by late spring or early summer, but they are already starting on product designs for Seabird Island and other long-standing clients of Nations Creations.

There are currently four dedicated staff for Nations Creations, and two more who are split between the band and the company.

In the short-term, Campbell said the company will be working primarily as a print shop, providing products with and without Indigenous designs to local customers.

“We want to be there to service the whole community for their print shop needs,” Campbell said.

“We are a start up, so we want to make sure we are able to do one side of the house well, and it’s going to be profitable and functional,” he added.

Once the print shop is up and running, the next focus will be on establishing a gift shop in the Pioneer building itself.

“We think that it would be a lost opportunity if we didn’t have a storefront, seeing as how we are sort of a tourist hub with Harrison Hot Springs being right there,” Campbell said.

The inside of the building is in rough shape, Campbell said, but it has great potential.

“The main entry area is perfect for a storefront, it’s just gorgeous,” Campbell said, adding that “we’ve got some aesthetic work to do, both on the interior and the exterior.”

Glassware with Indigenous designs are among some of the products Nations Creations is hoping to bring to Agassiz. (Nations Creations/Contributed)

The entrance off Cheam Avenue shows off what would be the main storefront area, with a large entryway and a broad staircase leading to the upstairs with an old saloon-style railing.

The storefront would include items like lanyards, mugs, hats, glassware, mouse pads, coasters, t-shirts, hoodies and track pants. The company is also getting set up with an embroidery machine, which will allow artists to see their work embroidered on blankets and other textiles.

“We’ve got an opportunity to do a lot of stuff, it’s going to be exciting,” Campbell said.

There’s a lot to be done before the business is ready to take off, but Campbell and others at Seabird Island are looking to what they hope will be a successful future for the company.

“We’d love to be in competition with companies like Native Northwest,” Campbell said. “That’s sort of a long-term stretch goal, but we’d love to have an Indigenous company in competition with this non-Indigenous company selling Indigenous products.”

Do You Have Mice and Rat Troubles?

We used to have rats around our place too. We found out we had to change a few things.

Don't wait for somebody to come fix the problem, the mice and rats won't wait. Do everything you can as soon as you can. The longer you wait the worse the problem will get. Your home is your fortress and you need to protect it from these ruthless invaders!

There are a few ways to keep mice and rats out of your home. Many of which people overlook.

Keeping your yard clean and clutter free. Especially around the house. Anything around the outside of your home becomes a place for these critters to build a home outside your door, waiting to find a way in and even provides a safe place for them to start digging their way into your home.

Keep everything at least 20 feet from the home this includes:

- Shrubs and trees
- Rose bushes
- All appliance; new and old
- Boards
- Garbage bins
- Old broken down vehicles
- Keep the rest of your yard clean and free of food scents as well.
- Clean the barbeque immediately following use.
- Do not leave food outside
- Try to ensure only your animals are eating the food you put out for them. This could mean hanging out with them until their food is done and taking the dish away when they are done.
- Clean your gutters, yup they hide in there too!
- Put screens on your windows and doors, to keep them out while you have them open.

When you find a hole or how they are trying to get in, fill it with steel wool and secure the hole, by nailing a board over it, sealing them out.

REMINDER!

Housing applications must be renewed before JANUARY 1st each year to remain on the list!

Anyone who did not renew came off the list and must now reapply if interested.

Please make sure the Housing Program has your current contact information.

Inside your home is just as important to defend from critters and critters like a home full of clutter, with lots of places to hide where they can find food. As such keeping your home tidy and clean will also help.

- Do your dishes daily
- Keep your food sealed and put away in the cupboards
- Keep your clutter away from entrances (doors and windows)

Remember, this does not fall to one person. Everybody who lives in the house can help too! Chores help a person grow and develop a sense of pride. Good luck!

How to Apply to Federal Government Jobs

I encourage you to create an account at www.Canada.ca/gcjobs and apply for all the positions that interest you. At the bottom of the job ad, there will be contact information to use when inquiring about the progress of your application.

What is a Poster?

A poster is a Job Ad for positions available within the Federal Government. When applying on these posters, please note that you are not applying for a specific job. The government's hiring process is not like in the private sector. By applying and going through the assessment process, (interview, possibly a test) you will be found either qualified or not by a Board of typically 2 to 3 board members. If you are found qualified you will be placed on a list along with all other successful candidates. In the Federal Government department, this list is typically referred to as a qualified pool of candidates. What this means is that when a manager has a need to staff a position, whether temporarily or permanently, they typically go to the qualified pool of candidates to make a selection.

General Tips for Applying

Find the information you need at www.Canada.ca/gcjobs

1. Create an account, and input your contact information, education, and your resumé. Your resumé will be retained on file so that you can upload your resumé to each application.
2. Log into your account to apply.
3. Sign up for job alerts. This program will automatically send an email to alert you to open positions that fit your profile.
4. Check federal government and various department social media accounts: they use Facebook, Instagram and Twitter to promote job openings.
5. Visit www.Canada.ca/gcjobs to find a list of available jobs, which can be searched by location. Search British Columbia to see all the jobs available, you can also narrow down your search to specific areas, for example Abbotsford.
6. The job ad: Jobs are described as casual, term (for a set amount of time), or indeterminate (permanent). Jobs are generally open to Canadian citizens, persons residing in Canada, and Canadian citizens residing abroad.
7. Essentials for the job: be sure to carefully read the whole job ad to see what skills are essential and which are considered assets.
8. Language profile: About 55 percent of positions in the federal government require English only, about 40 percent are bilingual imperative, and less than five percent are French only. Bilingual imperative jobs are classified like this: BBB/BBB, which corresponds to the reading, writing, and oral proficiency of your second and your first official language. To get an idea of your level of language proficiency, sample tests are available online. Google Public Service Commission Second Language Evaluation test. "There is a high concentration of bilingual jobs available in Quebec and in the National Capital Region (Ottawa and Gatineau), but there are many jobs available for those who are not bilingual," says Grace. "In geographic areas where there are not as many bilingual people, there is a higher percentage of English-only jobs. In Quebec, there is a higher percentage of French-only jobs."
9. Employment Equity – If you are an Indigenous person, a person with disabilities, a member of a visible minority group or a woman, you have the option of indicating that on your application. Some jobs may be targeted to one of those categories.
10. Make sure the closing date has not passed. However, some job postings have no closing date because there is ongoing continuous recruitment.
11. Before you apply to a job ad, follow all the instructions and read the job ad carefully to make sure you meet all the essential qualifications listed. Be clear and precise in your application. Provide specific examples to demonstrate how you meet the essential qualifications listed. For example, if an essential qualification is proficiency in Microsoft Word, elaborate on how you used the program and avoid general terms. Describe your work experience starting at the most recent, and provide exact dates. Do not use "we" – say what you did. Use action words such as developed, coordinated, produced, ran. When you cut and paste your information from the resumé into the job application, make sure that the format has not changed. Tips: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0GW7P3g9hhI&feature=youtu.be>
12. Make sure you submit only what is asked for. Submit a cover letter only if requested. If you are asked to submit a cover letter, make sure the information on the resumé matches the information on the cover letter. The cover letter should give detailed examples of how your experience matches each essential qualification listed in the job ad. Applicants may be asked to complete an Unsupervised Internet Test, which is completed online at home.
13. Submit the application before the deadline. Don't wait until the last minute to apply, because the application process is fairly lengthy.
14. Screening questions can relate to both the essential and the assets listed on the application. After answering the screening questions and submitting the application, the initial screening is done by computer. If you answered no to any of the essential qualifications, you will be screened out.

15. During the hiring process, you can ask for assessment accommodations. For example, if you have a visual impairment, you could be given a test presented in a larger font. This accommodation allows you to fully demonstrate the assessed competencies, but will have no impact on your chances of being hired for that position.
16. To find out about the status of your application, and the jobs you have applied to in the past, visit your job profile. It may say you have been screened out or that your application has been retained and you will be contacted if further assessment is required.
17. The next level of screening will be done by an HR person or the hiring manager. They look at your application, check if you have the essential qualifications, and verify your answers against your resumé. If you said you were proficient in Microsoft Word in your screening questions but there are no examples of that skill listed on your resumé, you will be screened out or you may be contacted for more information. "It is important to align your resumé with the essential qualifications listed on the job ad."
18. The next step is an assessment, which could include an interview, testing, and reference checks. Very technical positions may require a knowledge test. Assessments for administrative positions may focus on soft skills. You could be interviewed by telephone or in person by a panel of at least two people who will be taking notes. You will be asked questions about the qualifications, and your answers will be given a rating.
19. At the bottom of the job ad, there will be contact information to use when inquiring about the progress of your application.

20. A job offer will be made to the successful candidate, or the competition may be used to set up a pool of candidates to be hired for multiple positions. Make sure your e-mail service does not have a filter that could block emails from the public service.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

How will you communicate with me?

We will contact you by email or through your GC Jobs account.

Please ensure that your email is valid and accepts messages from unknown users. It is your responsibility to regularly check your email, junk mail and your GC Jobs account to find out about all the information regarding this inventory.

How does an inventory work?

An inventory can be used by various hiring managers to meet their current and future needs. As a result, you will apply only once to be considered for multiple job opportunities at the CR-05 and AS-01 levels, or equivalent.

Why was my application automatically rejected when I submitted it?

In order to be placed in the inventory, you must meet the essential education qualification at the time you submit your application. If you receive a message "Application rejected at screening" immediately after submitting your application, you probably answered "No" to the screening question assessing the essential qualification of education. If you have incorrectly indicated "No" for this qualification, simply retrieve your application and update your answer to the screening question.

What does "Registered in the inventory" mean?

Once your application has been successfully submitted to the inventory, your status may be: "Date of disclosure of results: Listed in the inventory". This automatically generated message by the system means that your application can be considered. You will be informed in the event that your application is considered as part of a process generated from this inventory.

What happens if my application expires?

Your application will be kept in the inventory for 30 days. A notice will be posted in the "My Job File" menu of your account 5 days before your application expires. If you do not take this into account, your application will be deactivated and it will no longer be considered for submissions from this inventory. In the event that your application expires during the effective period of this inventory, a notice will be posted in your account. If you wish to confirm your interest and reactivate your application, select the "Renewal of my application" link.

My personal information has changed, what should I do?

Simply update them in the "Personal Information" section, in the "My Job File" menu of your account. This will allow us to have your current contact information and ensure adequate follow-up in the event that your application is considered as part of a process issued from this inventory.

I have a disability that does not allow me to apply online, who do I contact to help me with the submission of my job application?

You can contact Sherry Sigurdson at Sherry.Sigurdson@csc-scc.gc.ca

Who can I contact if I have technical difficulties with the GC Jobs website?

You can contact the Public Service Commission of Canada's support centre by selecting the "Contact Us" link below, in the left corner of this window, or by calling 1-888-780-4444.
