CHIEF & COUNCIL

Message from the Chief

Last month, Seabird hosted the Union of BC Indian Chiefs for the second year and there was much to discuss.

"It was an interesting meeting," said Chief Seymour, "Education was a big agenda item and specific claims was another. I put some things back on the table with regard to specific claims and the 1,300-acres we lost to the Fraser River." This marks the second time Seabird has put the topic on the agenda. "They rejected it before, so I put it back on their table."

Fishermen and dry rackers have also been on the Chief's mind and talks are underway to get our people out on the water.

"We're having a lot of problems with our fisheries because there are runs that are coming back, the Early Stewarts, aren't picking up the way they're hoping they were supposed to." "We're hoping to get our dry rackers out shortly, but I don't know how that's going to happen or when it's going to happen. From talks with Department of Fisheries and Oceans, they're saying they hope to get them out towards the end of July before everyone else so we can get some fish hung."

The new Chief and Council have changed their meeting schedule and quarterly meetings, moving them to the evenings.

The Chief is happy with how things have been progressing with the portfolios, which were released last month. New Councillors are getting up-to-date on things happening within their portfolios.

"It seems to be working pretty good. The portfolio system is structured in a way where they have to sign off on things before they come to work here, so it will make their meetings a lot quicker and it's working."

The Seabird Island Community School roof replacement project got underway in mid-July and there are a few other capital projects in the works for this summer.

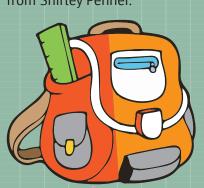

"The new roof is coming and they started working. They're finishing off the gymnasium back here. Renovations inside there will be done this summer and there are some things inside the Millennium Hall that we're re-doing."

School Supply Allowance

Forms available at the Band Office or from Shirley Penner.

Allowance is only for students that reside within the community (Band or Community Member) and are attending a school outside the community.

PUBLIC WORKS, CUSTODIAL & HOUSING

Seabird Island Community School receives new roof in $800,000 project

It's been a long time coming. For the last 2-years, leaky areas of Seabird Island Community School's roof have been covered with tarps - providing a short-term fix to a long-term problem. It wasn't a pretty solution, but it gave Seabird time to seek funding to replace the aging cedar shingle roof.

"We started that process in 2014. We were talking to the architect at that point, we knew the roof needed to be replaced. The School was built in 1991, at that point it was 23 years old and the roof was starting to display some serious wear and tear," explained Councillor Stacy McNeil who holds the Education portfolio.

There was a lot to consider before the project could move forward back in 2014. Seabird began seeking quotes on replacement options.

"We looked at the way it is now with the cedar shingles, then we looked at asphalt shingles, tin and the different options," said Stacy.

But the architect was firm in his belief that the cedar aesthetics be maintained as part of the design. The cultural significance of cedar to our community led Seabird to agree with the architect and commit to replacing the shingles with new cedar ones. Once that decision was made and costs were established, Seabird began approaching funders and in 2016, the project received funding from Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada to replace the 37,600 square foot cedar shingled roof. Much of the roof will remain the same, except for one small detail, according to Greg Cross, Director of Public Works, Custodial and Housing. "The design will still remain the same with some enhancement for better insulation."

Crews officially began July 18 and Councillor Stacy McNeil was excited to see work get underway.

"It's been 26 years since the School was built - we moved in May of 1991," said Stacy who remembers that day clearly.

"I remember packing our desks across the field from the Old School. The School has been a huge part of our community for a long time and we're proud of it. I'm glad that we're able to take care of it." Keeping work close to home was also an important consideration.

"Giving the work to the trained people we have locally, having them work in our local businesses is key," explained Stacy.

So, Seabird called upon Stqó:ya Construction to partially manage the project with crews from Fraser Valley Roofing.

Stqó:ya will be providing project management as well as ensuring that Band Members are working on the project.

Maintenance isn't just a one-time task, it's an on-going one that can be planned years in advance. A replacement reserve is being created to cover the costs of future replacements.

The project will take the rest of the summer. It should take roughly two months to complete, dependent on weather and unforeseen issues.

Dr. Fox returns from fellowship program with new knowledge and skills

The wait is over! After taking a year off to undergo a fellowship study, Dr. Robert Fox has returned to normal duties at the Health Centre.

During his fellowship at St. Paul's Hospital in downtown Vancouver, Dr. Fox expanded his knowledge of a range of addiction behaviors, such as substance abuse - including street drugs, alcohol and prescription drug abuse - as well as behavioral issues like gambling.

St. Paul's Hospital is an acute care, teaching and research hospital located in downtown Vancouver. It is home to many world-class medical and surgical programs, including heart and lung services, HIV/AIDS, mental health, emergency, critical care, kidney care, elder care and numerous surgical specialties.

His time a St. Paul's was an eye-opening experience and Dr. Fox saw first-hand what addictions can drive people to do.

"I saw people who ate hand sanitizer and all sorts of things," said Dr. Fox, but he was most surprised by the knowledge available that is currently ignored.

"The amount of research and evidence that we have regarding addictions and its treatments that are not being used yet has surprised me."

While in Vancouver, Dr. Fox mainly worked out of St. Paul's Hospital with the addictions consultation team.

"For 3-months I saw any patient who was admitted that needed addictions help. That included seeing people in emergency who were in overdose crisis. I also studied at other hospitals doing similar work. I spent a few months at treatment centres working with people who weren't ill but wanted treatment and also spent time in detox centres."

It's been quite some time since Dr. Fox was last in a classroom and it was an adjustment to be a student again.

"I was a little rusty when it came to being a learner again. Having doctors that were younger than me reviewing my work took a bit of humility but learning is enjoyable." He's already putting his new education to work to help the community.

In recent years, medical professionals have changed their understanding of addictions and their treatment methods.

"We consider addictions to be more like asthma than pneumonia. If you suffer from pneumonia you go to the hospital and get antibiotics. Six-weeks later, you're cured. You wouldn't say that with someone who has asthma. If someone came in with a bad asthma flare-up and got treated in emergency so they could breathe again, they would still need to be on medication to control their condition. That's our understanding of addiction. Recovery is a process that requires steps and work."

On July 20, Dr. Fox held the first open discussion on addictions and recovery. The Lunch and Learn session was a hit, the 30-participants could barely fit in the Community Health Room. The first session aimed at opening a dialogue on addictions and make people think about what recovery means because recovery and addiction isn't just a simple question of abstinence. "Being abstinent, no longer taking the substance is a good start, but addiction is now thought of as a chronic disease where people need long-term recovery from the side effects." More sessions are planned in the near future and Dr. Fox is happy to finally be finished his studies.

"I'm so thrilled to be back. I'm not a Vancouver boy. I love being at Seabird. I am just so happy to be here. Two-weeks before I moved back I had a dream that I was walking back into my home in Chilliwack and I was laughing in my sleep, so I'm so happy to be here."

As he gets back to work, Dr. Fox will be catching up on all of his patients, which will be a long process.

Dr. Denby, who took over while Dr. Fox was away, will now be working one day a week to run the Skwah clinic on Thursdays. This will allow Dr. Fox one day a week where he can focus on addictions patients and issues.

Part of that day will include providing clinic time for clients of the A:yelexw Centre for Hope and Healing which provides a 'family' home for indigenous adults 19 years and up to overcome addictions.

Welcome back Dr. Fox!

Pre-kindergarten program coming for the fall

Seabird Island Community School is happy to offer a full-day pre-kindergarten program, called K4, for children four years of age. Developed in partnership with Early Childhood Development, the program incorporates literacy, numeracy and learning through play-based activities to prepare children for traditional kindergarten.

"Learning through play is the focus, introducing academics in a fun way, so children aren't sitting there at a desk and doing math and things like that. They're going to be outside doing things like counting berries and looking at things in their environment. Things children will enjoy doing at the same time as getting the skills they need before going into kindergarten," explains Councillor Stacy McNeil.

"There's lots of statistics in the district and in the province that a lot of our children aren't kindergarten ready. By putting this program in place, we'll be able to better prepare our children for that transition into kindergarten."

Children will build a foundation for learning in a safe, caring, play-based environment that promotes their physical, social, emotional and cognitive development. However, some parents may worry about jumping right into a full-day program and staff are diligently planning to alleviate worries. "It will be a gradual entry while we get everything going. Some parents may be worried that about a full-day program right off the bat, but there's going to be some transition plans for kids to gradually enter into that full-day."

Children will participate in a half-day September 5.

The program will be run at the Early Childhood Centre with Pre-School teacher Cory Castle and a Kindergarten teacher from the School, offering the perfect balance of literacy and play.

The inclusion of Early Childhood Development also ensures families have access to other health supports.

"Keeping it within the Early Childhood Centre will ensure access to important programs like Supported Child Development and Speech and Language," as well as access to all their other programs in addition to services from the school. Culture and language will also be embedded in the program, just like programs at the School and in Early Childhood Development.

A second community meeting will be held on August 28 from 6 - 8 p.m. at the Early Childhood Centre.

During the meeting, families will learn about the program, get a tour of the facility, and meet other parents and staff.

Education jurisdiction talks sparked again

It's been a long time since the community has heard the words 'education jurisdiction' uttered. Seabird was once at the forefront of education jurisdiction, which would give the community control of the education their children receive on reserve - allowing us to govern curriculum, set qualifications for staff and balance cultural practices with in-class activities and homework.

With education jurisdiction, Seabird Island Community School would continue to teach the provincial curriculum with the added benefit of adding in more cultural pieces.

"It was the dream of our grandparents had when our parents, uncles and aunts were small - to have a school in the community teaching what we want them to know in addition to maintaining the provincial curriculum," explained Councillor Stacy McNeil.

However, talks abruptly ended with the previous Conservative government threatening to restrict funding dollars for education. "Negotiations stopped for a long time because under the previous government they introduced own-source revenue and said that if we got education jurisdiction our dollars would be less. So, that kind of halted everything. Under the new Liberal government, they opened up the doors and negotiations started again."

Now, Seabird has until September 2018 to formally decide if we want to have control over education.

"Staff are developing plans to start re-engaging the community and informing them of what's going on so they're familiar with what education jurisdiction means. That's key to working up to a possible referendum for the community." Community Members can expect to see more information, monthly events and activities to re-open the discussion.

HEALTH & SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

First Nations communities rallying to help evacuees

It was a long, uncertain journey for the Elders from Canim Lake. The group of fourteen Elders, caregivers and pets were headed home from the Elders Gathering at Campbell River on Vancouver Island July 11 - 13. Many of the Elders had made it all the way to Kamloops when the evacuation order was issued for their community and they were forced to turn around.

Canim Lake, located near 100 Mile House, received the evacuation notice July 15 and the Elders have been stuck in the Fraser Valley ever since. Many needed medical care for diabetes-related concerns, like foot care but were far from their community.

The Elders first made contact with Stó:lō Nation who connected with First Nations Health Authority. "Stó:lō stepped in with their emergency services and got them housed in Abbotsford right away and got them registered with the Red Cross as soon as they could," explained Susan Stoneson of the First Nations Health Authority.

They also helped connect the Elders with local Bands for support, health services and activities and our Health and Social Development Department, along with several other Nations, were more than happy to help.

While some Elders went for a cultural tour at Stó:lō, many came to Seabird July 19, for a rest, foot care, healthy food and a comfy place to visit relatives before continuing on to their hotel in Abbotsford.

"The communities are definitely rallying," said Susan. "The Elders have housing for another week and we're going day by day and some of their families are coming down as well, they've been evacuated, so they will be reunited which is good."

The activities and outings help keep the Elders moving and connected during a stressful time. It's also been helpful for many of the Elders who have support pets with them. First Nations Health Authority is expecting more families to arrive soon if wildfire conditions do not improve and is looking to connect them as well. "Now they're looking at some activities for Youth who are starting to trickle down. We're trying to get movie passes, waterslide passes and bringing them to some of the local places that have events and have a gym to do some activities for the kids."

Assembly of BC Indian Chiefs reported that 20-Bands have been affected and First Nations Health Authority is working to ensure they remain connected, no matter where they land in the Province and Seabird is helping where it can.

Several families within the community have taken in relatives affected by wildfires and Seabird is planning to provide food assistance where it can.

If you are currently providing housing for an evacuee, contact Carolyne Neufeld at 604-796-2177.

The Learning Curve continues after program completion at Seabird College

Seabird College is proud to partner with other post-secondary institutions to bring educational opportunities to our community. These partnerships allow instructors to come and share their knowledge and skills with our students.

Certifications, training, education, skills and experience are key to many employment opportunities.

The transition from being a student to finding and keeping a job can be a difficult one; however, there are a number of support systems offered to our students equally.

Seabird College, in addition to offering a variety of support systems to encourage everyone to reach their potential, also assists students in job placement and work experience.

The Employment, Training and Social Development team assists the students with resume writing skills, interview skills and connecting them with potential employers. When applicable, they also assist with coordinating work experience placements in appropriate work environments.

This year, the Construction Craft, Welder Foundation and Heavy Equipment Operator students have all met with Isabel McLean of STEP BC. The Skilled Trades Employment Program (STEP) launched in 2006. From the start, STEP has focused on finding motivated, trained and ready-to-work candidates for construction employers with jobs to fill.

Isabel has come and visited our classrooms on a few occasions and provided information on what STEP can do to assist them in finding work and apprenticeship hours in their trades. Our trades students have had the opportunity to study under the guidance of instructors from Thompson Rivers University, whom have had years of their own life experience to share.

Learning from someone who has also been in the beginner's shoes can help provide some relief and more approachable to ask questions.

Similarly, with our Industry Training Authority representative, Andrew George. Andrew, who is a Red Seal Chef, has visited our students on several occasions, giving them guidance and direction on their journey towards apprenticeship.

To connect of employers to potential employees, Seabird Island partnered with:

- Britco Structures
- Ledcor
- RIMEX
- Ironside Design Manufacturing
- Jakes Construction
- Stqó:ya Construction
- Jewel Holdings

Trans Mountain and Kinder Morgan have also been strong supporters of our trades programs and have provided information of employment opportunities in other areas of the province.

If you haven't looked at the 2017-2018 program offerings for Seabird College yet, please do so. There are a number of opportunities available right here, you just need to come and register for them.

New Staff Introduction

Pearl Penner Lands Administration Assistant

I began working with Lands on May 15. Previous to this, I was an Administration Assistant in Employment and Social Development. I first started working here in 2016 when I completed a three month social work practicum in Health and Social Development.

While completing my practicum, I attended a few Bannock and Teas. Bannock and Tea was my first introduction to Lands and the Lands team. I have always had an interest in land claims, land governance, and aboriginal rights and title.

Attending these sessions and learning about Seabird's Land Code sparked my interest and motivated me to obtain a Certificate in Indigenous Studies which focused on the history and importance of land claims.

I have a very strong academic background that I bring with me to Land. I hold a Social Services Diploma: First Nation option, a Bachelor of Social Work and a Certificate in Indigenous Studies: Maps, Films, Rights and Land Claims from the University of the Fraser Valley. While in university, I had the honour of learning from Gwen Point, Herb Joe, Eddie Gardner, Sonny McHalsie, and Hugh Brody.

Before graduating, I had the pleasure of assisting with a research project that looked into the First Nations submissions to the 2012 Cohen Commission of Inquiry into the Decline of Sockeye Salmon in the Fraser River.

The research focused on stories that were shared with the commission, including stories reflecting the importance of salmon to the First Nations people.

As a child, I had the honour of knowing the late Mary Uslick from Skowkale First Nation. My family was first introduced to Mary when I was eight years old. My mother, Patricia Penner, was a board member of Mary's Medicine Wheel Society and Skemcis Medicine Lodge Society for several years.

I attended Mary's Medicine Wheel ceremony that took place in Mission. Mary was and still is a huge part of my life. I did not grow up knowing my biological grandparents and Mary allowed my family to call her Grandma. Mary was the only grandparent I knew and for that, I will always be grateful. I carry Mary's teachings with me in my heart and into all of my work.

I'm very excited to be working with Seabird. I enjoy working with the community, and I'm passionate about learning as much as I can about land governance.

My position allows me to exercise my passion for research and incorporate the teachings that I carry into my everyday work.

Wildfires affecting air quality for the Valley

Across the province, 136-wildfires now span an area greater than 131,000-hectares.

The fire closest to Seabird, Harrison Lake, has blanketed our once scenic mountains with smoke, leading to poor air quality.

The Harrison Lake wildfire grew to 202-hectares and as of recent reports, the wildfire is 30% contained, thanks to the 14 fire fighters on-site.

The fire still poses no risk to our community, however, families should monitor air quality reports. So far, two Special Air Quality Statements have been issued for the Fraser Valley.

"Exposure is particularly a concern for infants, the elderly and those who have diabetes, and lung or heart disease," explains Environment Canada.

When air quality is poor, persons with chronic underlying medical conditions should postpone strenuous exercise until the advisory is lifted and watch for symptoms that air quality if affecting you.

"If you are experiencing symptoms such as chest discomfort, shortness of breath, coughing or wheezing, follow the advice of your healthcare provider. As we are in the summer season with warm temperatures, it is also important to stay cool and hydrated. Indoor spaces with air conditioning may offer relief from both heat and air pollution."

If air quality is affecting you, please make an appointment with the health clinic by calling 604-796-2165. For all emergencies, call 911.

For more information on current air quality, visit: www.bcairquality.ca.

Hunting in other territories

Hello this is Ed Chapman, I have recently been to a band meeting with the Chief and Council in Hedley to discuss the issue of hunting on their sacred lands without permission or following protocol. Permission does not get handed down from generation to generation.

Follow these simple steps allows us to build a relationship with other communities.

Write a letter stating the days that you want to hunt. It must state the animal you are hunting, the numbers of days you plan on hunting and you must follow rules and regulations like everyone else. Your letter is only good for the dates that you have requested. If you need more time, another letter must be submitted.

Also stated in the meeting was that they would only like us to hunt bucks or bulls, leaving the cows and young ones to repopulate. If an Elder requests a dry cow or dry doe, this must be stated in the permission letter. That is the only reason they will accept the killing of cow or doe.

AMBULANCE BILLS

Please submit ambulance bills as soon as vou receive them. If the bill is more than 1 year old, ambulance costs will no longer be covered under the Non-Insured Health Benefits (NIHB). Anyone with a status number can have the ambulance paid for by Health Canada as long as it's not an ICBC claim.

We can only provide assistance to those with a status number.

Unfortunately, ambulance bills will not be covered if you were also incarcerated in jail. Ambulance Billing will know if you were incarcerated based on the bill's address. Please do not bring these in as they will be denied and it will be the client's responsibility to pay.

Please note, if you were taken home in an ambulance after a stay in the hospital, this will not be covered and it will be the client's responsibility to pay.

Contact Maggie Pettis 604-796-2177.

MEDICAL CARDS

Need to apply for a new medical card because it was lost of stolen? We can assist you when applying for a new one.

Please note, we do not assist with BC ID applications.
